DV-alert is a nationally recognised training program that enables community frontline workers to confidently:

- Recognise signs of domestic and family violence
- Respond with appropriate care
- Refer people experiencing or at risk of domestic and family violence to appropriate support services

What are the benefits of DV-alert?

Participants who complete the nationally recognised training will:

- Receive a Statement of Attainment for the unit of competency CHCDFV001: Recognise and Respond to Domestic and Family Violence
- Receive the opportunity to network and gain an understanding of services available in your community.

Non-accredited training sessions are also free and available to any member of the public.

Financial assistance

The training fee is waived for health, allied health and community frontline workers in Australia. This is made possible through the funding support of the Australian Government Department of Social Services.

Support costs for travel, accommodation and staff backfill for participants who complete the accredited face-to-face workshops is also available. Terms and conditions apply.
